

The Ruggero Ceppellini Advanced School of Immunology

offers an Advanced Course on:

The recrudescence of an old infectious disease:
tuberculosis

Congress Center University of Naples “Federico II”

Via Partenope, Naples, Italy

2 - 5 May 2007

The Course Director: Stefan H. E. Kaufmann

The “Campania” section of the Italian Society of Immunology has celebrated the Day of Immunology by organizing a posters session meeting. During this event the young scientists working in the immunology groups which operate in Campania have illustrated the ongoing scientific activities spanning from basic immunology, studies on immunodeficiencies, allergic diseases, autoimmune diseases and new vaccines formulation. A brief note of the event was diffused to the Italian press. Moreover, we have also benefited of the concomitant presence in Naples (2-5 May) of a prestigious course entitled : “The recrudescence of an old infectious disease: tuberculosis”. The course was organised by the Ruggero Ceppellini Advanced School of Immunology (www.ceppellini.it) and by the Italian Institute of Philosophical studies and the European Federation of Immunological Societies-European Journal of Immunology. The Ceppellini School was founded by Prof. Serafino Zappacosta. It is well known in the community of Immunologists and it is a pride of the Campania region. The course on tuberculosis was directed by Prof. Stefan Kaufmann. It was enjoyed by all the participants for the excellent standard of the lectures. and has represented the first new activity of the Ceppellini School one year after the death of Prof. Serafino Zappacosta.